Roman currency for most of Roman history consisted of gold, silver, bronze, orichalcum and copper coinage. From its introduction to the Republic, during the third century BC, well into Imperial times, Roman currency saw many changes in form, denomination, and composition. A persistent feature was the inflationary debasement and replacement of coins over the centuries. Notable examples of this followed the reforms of Diocletian. This trend continued into Byzantine times. Due to the economic power

Roman currency - Wikipedia

During the Roman Republic, the Roman economy was largely agrarian, centered on the trading of commodities such as grain and wine. Financial markets were established through such trade, and financial institutions which extended credit for personal use and public infrastructure, were established primarily through inter-family wealth. In times of agricultural and cash shortfall, Roman officials ...

After the Sack of Rome by the Goths (410 CE), the coinage deteriorated into 8 mm specimens (see coin 8 from the reign of Valentinian III, 425-455 CE) that were light years from the works of art of the early Imperial period. But perhaps by then the Romans had learned how to navigate a virtually money-less economy.
